TWO SLAYERS PUT TO DEATH

Here and There

Editorial By ALEX. H. WASHBURN

AMERICANS who imagine themselves to be "practical" business men and who fondly hope to make a profit out of a European war from which they themselves expect to remain aloof, will get small comfort out of today's pronouncement by the League of Nations. The League is asking the United States if it will co-operate in shutting down all exports to whichever nation—Italy or Ethiopia—that the League finally decides is the offender. The United States ought to co-operate.

To expect a profit out of somebody else's misfortune is to invite heaven to send disaster some time upon ourselves. Nobody made a dime out of the World War.

The cotton farmer got 40 cents a pound one year, and probably will have to pay for it with eight years of five-cent cotton. Figures don't lie. War is a process of subtraction—and peace adds up the bill.

Industrial cities remember the wartime high wages. Mechanics got $40 and $50 a week, who in peacetime never earned more than $20.

They never really "earned" $40 and $50. They merely got it because most of the able-bodied labor that normally competed with them was away at the front, working for $30 a month—$1 a day.

Anybody can get high wages under those circumstances—but sooner or later the world pays for such folly.

X X X

Which is right in this crisis—the "practical business" view which encourages foreigners to fight each other, or the peace-loving ideal behind Wilson's dream of the original League of Nations?

Well, Moses gave the world Ten Commandments. We don't always follow them—but we respect them.

"Practical men" are always seeing some temporary gain by perverting the ideals of humanity, foolishly imagining that permanent good can come out of violating age-old principles that were laid down to prevent human misery and suffering.

These "practical men" remind me of what Lord Macaulay once said about a social bandit, his moral code being described as follows:

A system in which the two great commandments were, to hate your neighbor, and to love your neighbor's wife.

Hope Line Holds Powerful Camden Panthers, 6 to 0

Conquerors of Monroe, La., Defeat Bobcats by Only One Touchdown

A BATTLE IN RAIN

Locals Come Within Ace of Scoring But Slippery Ball Ruins Pass

The Camden High School Panthers, hard-pushed for three quarters, put over a lone touchdown in the final period to defeat the Hope High School football team, 6 to 0, in a hard-fought battle at Camden Friday night.

Despite a cold drizzle, the annual battle was attended by a large crowd of Hope fans as well as Camden supporters.

Camden's touchdown came soon after the fourth quarter opened. Taking the ball near mid-field, the Panthers worked it down the field on off-lark and line smashes mixed with several reverse plays.

Within two yards of the goal line, Moffett, halfback, got the ball on a triple crosscut and swept around his left end for the only score of the game. An attempted kick for extra point failed.

10 Downs to 7

Camden made 10 first downs to seven for the Bobcats.

The Hope team put up a great fight throughout the game, and in the second quarter threatened to score. Runs by Cargile and Ponder put the ball within 12 yards of the Camden goal. A pass was fired to Reese, but was too slippery for the Bobcat and he held on. The ball went through his arms as he rucled across the line.

Before another play could be executed the pistol ended the first half, robbing the Bobcats of their best opportunity to score.

The two teams battled on nearly even terms in the opening quarter, the Panthers having a slight edge. Most of the quarter was played in mid-field with neither team making a serious threat.

The second quarter saw the Bobcats break loose with a hard-running attack featuring Cargile, Stroud, Ponder and McDonald also made several yards to carry the ball to Camden's 12-yard line where the second period came to an end.

Camden Scores

The Bobcats battled stubbornly throughout the third quarter. Neither team seriously threatened. Camden took possession of the ball soon after the final period started, and started a drive that carried them across for their only score.

Although defeated, the Bobcats were impressive. Their play and all-around team work Friday night stamps them as a potent eleven in Arkansas high school football circles.

The Bobcats take on the Horatio High School Lions at Hope next Friday night. Horatio defeated Van Buren, 6 to 0, Friday afternoon.

It's a 3-Day Run From Red Sea to Ethiopian Capital

Only 150 Miles a Day, Because Train Has to stop at Nightfall

FRIENDLY (?) PEOPLE

Natives Sometimes Steal the Ties Right Out From Under Rails

By RICHARD G. MASSOCK Associated Press Correspondent

PARIS.—(AP)—War or no war, Ethiopia's only railroad plans to operate its two regular passenger trains a week, with stops overnight, its through boat trains whenever there is a boat at Djibouti, and freight trains as the traffic justifies.

Italy's dispute with Ethiopia up to now has made little difference to the French-owned line, which has not even had its carloadings increased by munitions shipments, officials say.

They hope hostilities will not disrupt a traffic which has suffered already from the depression.

The dinky little trains of the narrow-gauge line between Djibouti and Addis Ababa might rival Europe's famous Orient Express, or an American transcontinental limited, for adventure, picturesque and glamor were it along the hard-worn routes of tourist travel.

Daylight Safety Factor

Except for the through boat-trains which cover the 486 miles of the line's entire length in 2 to 33 hours during the dry season, it takes three days to make the journey, for daylight is an important safety factor on the Ethiopian line.

Wild tribes have been known to steal the ties from under the rails and the tropical torrents sometimes wash out track or dump boulders on it. Hence the regular passenger trains stop before sundown.

Some indication of the adventure of railroad travel in Ethiopia, as the trains crawl through desert and mountains, climbing 7,900 feet to Addis Ababa, is afforded by the time tables, available in Paris headquarters.

Guns Stop At Frontier

Travelers are warned by the time tables that guns are likely to be seized by the Ethiopian customs agents at Dire Dawa, the first overnight stop, for the importation of arms and ammunition is strictly forbidden without written permission of the government. This is more important than it seems, since big game hunting is the principal attraction the railroad has had to offer tourists.

Upon arriving at Djibouti, the passenger for Addis Ababa finds a boat-train awaiting him—there is a boat about once a week—or he may wait for one of the regular trains, leaving Tuesdays and Saturdays. These are made up of one car divided into first and second-class compartments and three or four third-class cars, with wooden seats, in which travel the noisy natives.

Black porters put the passenger's baggage aboard the train at Djibouti at 6:30 a. m. and the train starts clattering, grunting and swaying from the Red Sea coast across the scorching desert to Dire Dawa, where it arrives at 6:10 p. m. to put up for the night.

Sleep On Buffet Cars

The traveler sleeps on a cot in the hot station buffet until time to start at 8:35 a. m. the second day's zigzagging climb to Awash. Arriving at Awash at 5:55 p. m., he again sleeps in the station buffet until he resumes his trip at 6:30 a. m. on the third morning to arrive finally at Addis Ababa at 4:30 in the afternoon.

The boat-trains, operated during the dry season from October to May when the roadbed is more secure, creep along in the night, their native engineers and firemen peering to make certain with the aid of a powerful headlight that the tracks are clear.

Freight Just New and Then

Thus traveled 115,000 passengers last year, of whom 109,000 were white-clothed natives in third class. Part from the fare between Djibouti and Addis Ababa is $5.75, but for the European in second class it is $18.98 and the deluxe traveler in first class pays $39.10.

Freight trains, which take five days for the one-way trip, are made up only when enough goods accumulate to warrant the trip. There has been a slight increase in freight traffic this year, officials say, and perhaps this indicates the movement of war materials.

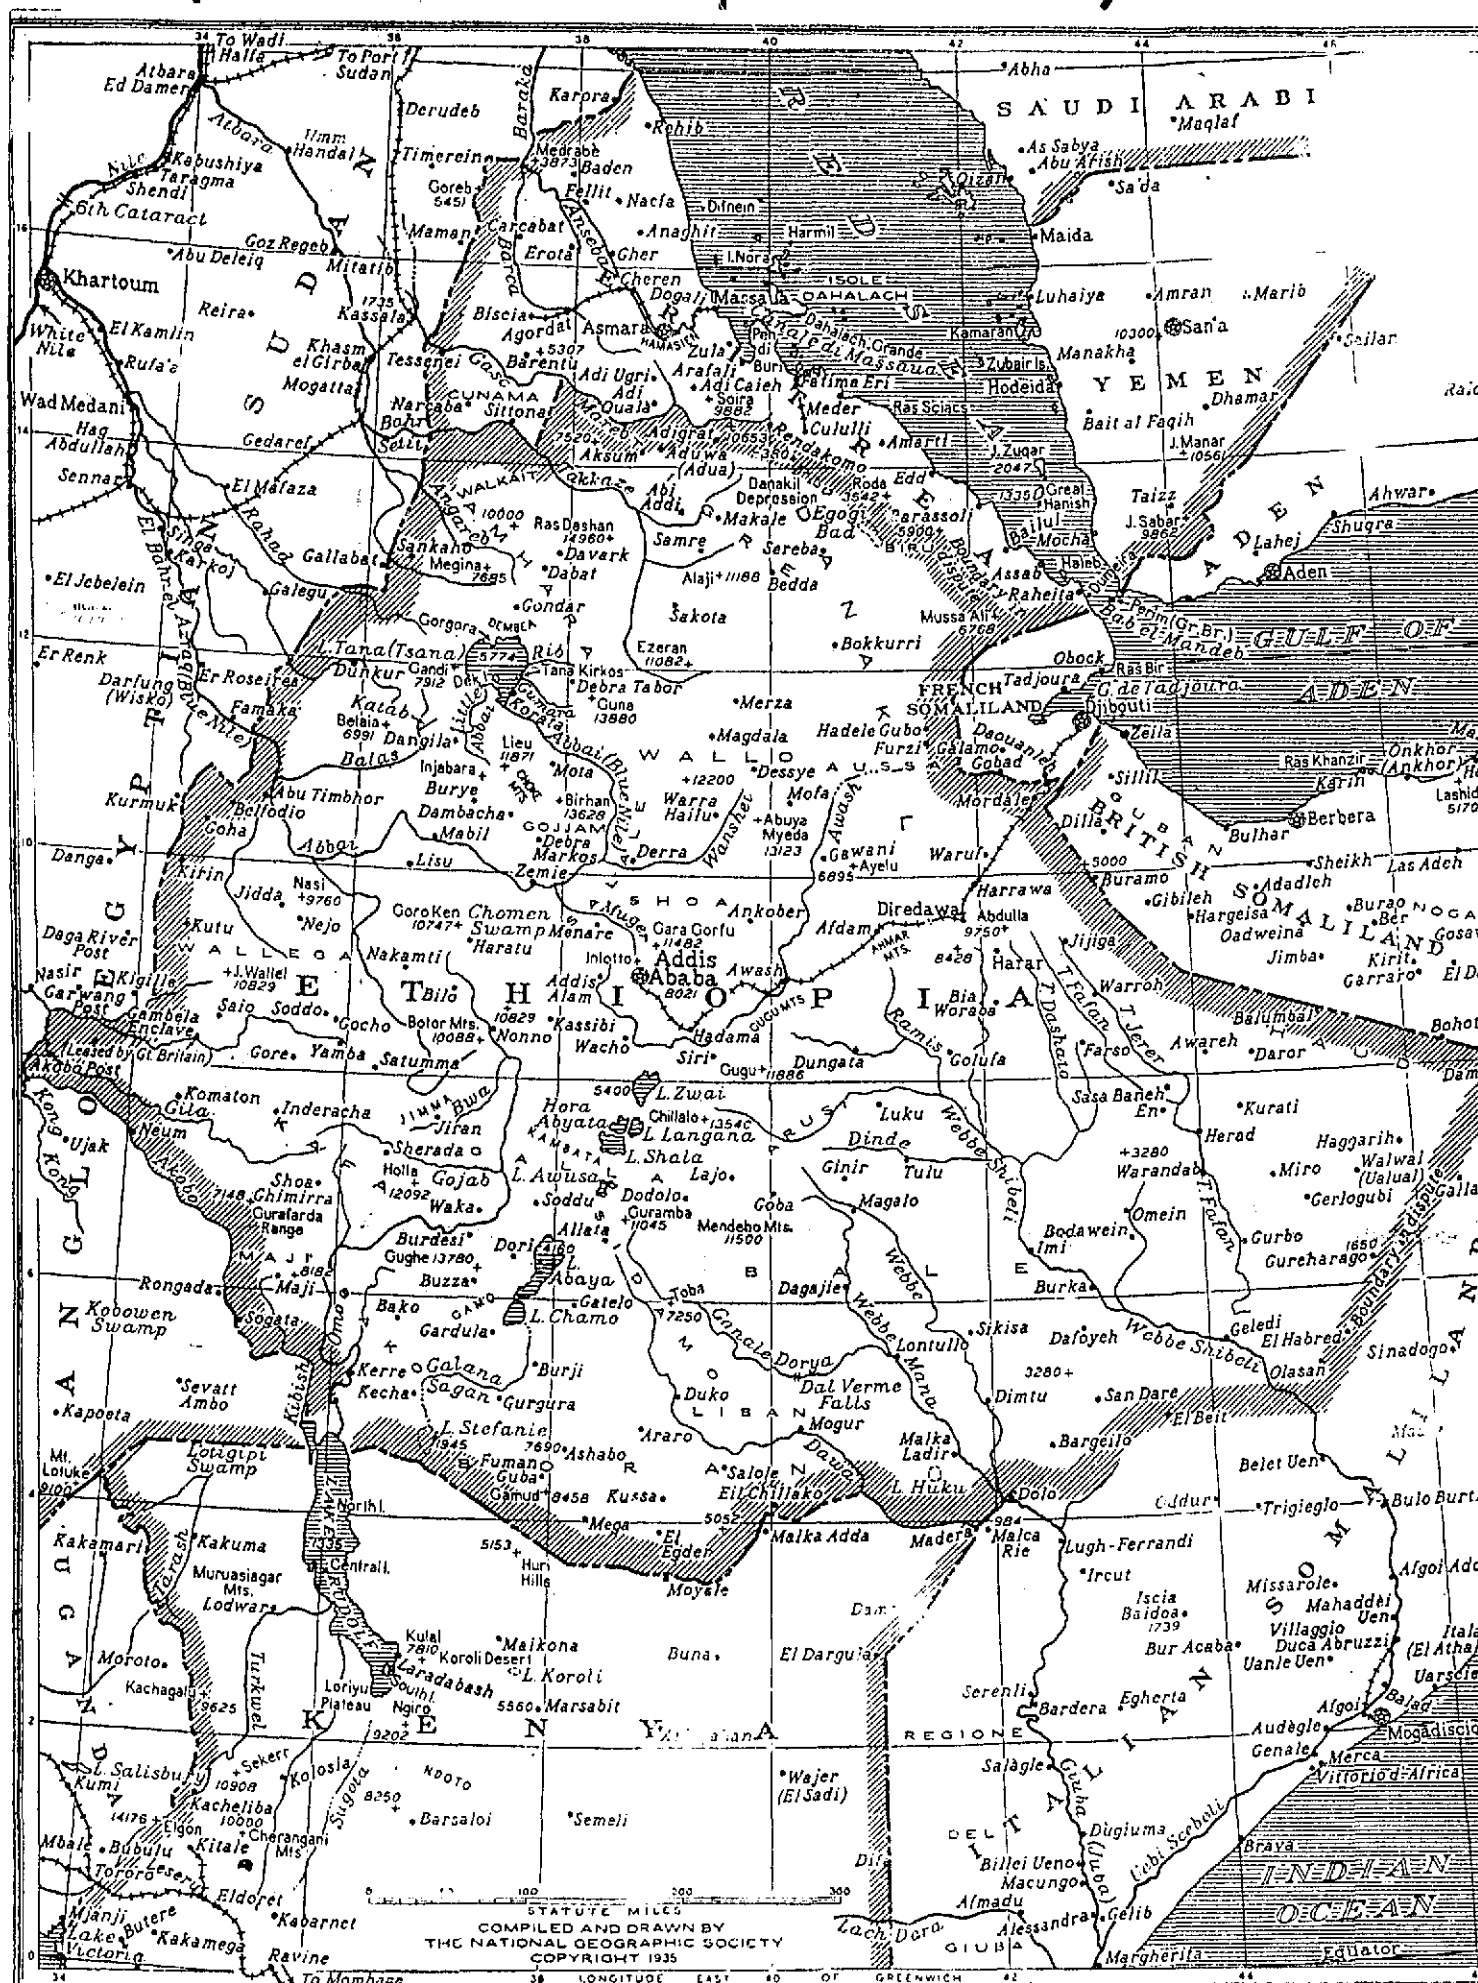

But the foreign embassies in Addis Ababa have, the officials assert, decried the railroad of any heavy munitions traffic it make have expected.

Chicot County Gets a Balanced Budget

LITTLE ROCK.—An audit of Chicot county records for the calendar year 1934, completed Friday by the county audit division of the state comptroller's office, showed that the county has lived within its income for several years, that it has no bonded debt, no floating debt, no delayed court session or other encumbrance of essential services because of depleted treasury.

League Anxious to Get Aid From U. S.

Wants Co-operation in Enforcing Embargo on War Materials

GENEVA, Switzerland.—(AP)—A request for at least the tacit co-operation of the United States in any eventual League sanctions against Italy was believed Friday night in League circles to be probable.

A resolution adopted in 1921 interpreting a punitive article of the covenant was receiving particular attention, which suggests that sanctions may be progressive, stresses the desirability of collaboration with countries which are not members of the League.

The report by Raymond Leslie Buell, president of the association, said President Roosevelt under the neutrality act could associate himself with these measures.

Withdrawal of diplomatic representatives from Rome, non-recognition of any situation created by Italy in Ethiopia in violation of the League covenant and the Pact of Paris; an embargo on the exports of munitions and implements of war to Italy; a League blockade of Italy to the extent of acquiescing to such a blockade; and fifth, the closing of the Suez Canal.

The question was whether Italy may continue freely to purchase cotton, oil, every iron and other raw materials from the United States, in case of a Geneva embargo against such products.

Inquest Ordered in Police Shooting

To Probe Deputy's Shooting of Night Watchman at West Memphis

WEST MEMPHIS, Ark.—(AP)—An inquest was ordered Tuesday night in the fatal shooting Thursday night of E. J. Putnam, 35, night watchman, by Chief Deputy Sheriff C. L. Good after officers said he had fired on the officer.

Officers said Putnam appeared to have started the shooting after being ordered to leave the graveyard track, where a report of a drunken man.

HAVANA, Cuba.—(AP)—A mad tropical hurricane cut a 150-mile swath through Cuba Saturday and roared northward, observers reported, to endanger the Florida coast. Behind it were broken communication lines to leave the fate of Matanzas, Santa Clara and Camaguey provinces veiled in a grim silence. Vessels and persons along the southeast Florida coast were warned to retire to safe places until the storm passed.

ENROUTE WITH PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT.—(AP)—President Roosevelt, traveling westward Saturday, gave blunt notice to the world that failure to renew the naval limitations treaty, or other renunciation, "could change the American policy" to build only to treaty strength. This was regarded as a direct reply to published reports of Great Britain's intention to renounce treaties. No official word of Great Britain's step had been received, but the president kept an eye on the situation Saturday.

LONDON, Eng.—(AP)—An authoritative source confirmed Saturday that the European crisis, coupled with the depletion of Great Britain's home fleet for Mediterranean service, has forced the British government to speed up plans for an emergency naval construction program.

The government is expected to reveal its plans in detail when parliament reassembles at the end of October.

Ollie Sandifer Is Named Supervisor

Prescott Woman Appointed to Post Here With District 7 of WPA

Miss Ollie Sandifer of Prescott was announced Saturday as new district supervisor of women's work for the nine counties of District Seven of the Works Progress Administration (WPA), having headquarters in Hope.

Miss Sandifer is well known in this territory, having been engaged in similar work for the last two years.

In 1933-34 she was statistical supervisor for the Civil Works Administration (CWA) in Clark, Nevada and Hempstead counties.

In 1934 she was field supervisor for women's work in Nevada county, and later became senior home supervisor for rural rehabilitation leaving the latter position to accept the Hope appointment Saturday.

Barnes, Nelson Die for Robberies That Ended in Killings

Governor Visits Pair in Deathhouse, But Refuses to Save Them

THEIR LAST TALK

"It's Cold," Says Futrell, "But Hot Enough for Me," Says Barnes

TUCKER PRISON FARM.—(AP)—Bill Barnes, 21, and Paul Nelson, 23, were put to death in the electric chair early Saturday for separate 1934 murders alleged to have been prompted by robbery motives.

Barnes was one of three persons charged with the slaying of C. U. Martin, Blytheville taxi driver last October in a robbery which netted 40 cents.

Nelson was convicted of slaying B. F. Mitchell, 75, a recluse, at the latter's home near Newport in May, 1934.

Both men went to the chair unassisted, maintaining their innocence to the last.

Visited by Governor

Gov. J. M. Futrell visited the death house at the state prison farm incoincidentally last Tuesday and talked with the two young men. Supt. Tom C. Cogbill of the penitentiary revealed.

Neither of the condemned, 23, recognized the chief executive. Both frequently expressed conviction that if they could talk to him they would be able to convince the governor they should not die.

Officials said that the governor commented that it was cold in the death house. "It's hot enough for me," Barnes was quoted as replying.

Mrs. Maddox visits Pair

Mrs. Ernie Maddox, the governor's daughter and secretary, visited Barnes Friday afternoon in response to a letter delivered to her earlier in the day. Prison officials said she made no comment after talking to the youth.

Friday night in the cell block the men nervously ate their "last supper" of chicken, tomatoes, ice cream, pie and cake. Both said they had abandoned all hope. Nelson said he would walk to the chair unassisted but repeated over and over, "I am innocent."

Prison officials, reporting the governor's unannounced visit to the death house, said Futrell commented it was cold.

Frost Strikes in Northern States

Snow Flurries Are Reported in Colorado, Nebraska and Wyoming

By the Associated Press

The frosty breath of autumn blew over the middle west Friday causing some crop damage and dispersing the heat that earlier in the week shattered longstanding records.

Growing vegetables and field crops were threatened as far south as northern Kansas and Missouri.

For the south general rains were beneficial for the most part, moistening soil in many areas, enough so farmers could begin winter wheat.

Snow flurries fell in Colorado, western Nebraska and eastern Wyoming, grounding planes at Cheyenne.

Oklahoma and Texas reported rains halted cotton picking for the time being and there was some damage to open bolls in Texas.

In central Texas rains of near cloud-burst volume sent Little river out of its banks.

Temperatures were in the high thirties and low forties over most of Kansas and Missouri. Amarillo, Texas had 47 degrees Friday night and generally cooler weather prevailed as far south as the Gulf of Mexico.

It's Shocking, the Way Tongue Can Burn!

A hot tongue is a nuisance in more senses than one, but the kind I mean is not the tongue that makes a smart or satirical reply. It is indeed a peculiar sensation that occurs to a good many people, causing them a lot of difficulty and giving the doctors even more trouble in its control.

In a typical case, the person feels a burning and stinging sensation on the surface of the tongue. No special food seems to aggravate or start the condition. A careful examination of the tongue may fail to reveal any sort of visible change.

Sometimes people who suffer from this sensation are in actual misery, yet every kind of treatment, short of large doses of sedative drugs, fails to alleviate the sensation. Mouth washes, tooth pastes, and lotions seem to have no effect.

A doctor recently reported the unusual experience of a woman who suffered from burning tongue for more than seven years. Her case had been studied thoroughly by any number of men, who finally concluded that the condition was largely mental.

Occasionally the woman felt that the burning was accompanied by a metallic taste. An investigation was made by this physician, who found that the tongue was close in two spots in the mouth to amalgam fillings, and on the other side there were three gold inlays, as repairs for the teeth.

Measurements were made with a device, called a micro-ammeter, for measuring the development of electrical current, and it was found that there was a distinct electrical current generated by the dissimilar metals.

The amalgam fillings were replaced with gold and the burning of the tongue promptly disappeared.

Some studies made in 1932 by a physician indicated that dissimilar metals in the mouth will develop this type of current, and that it is sometimes associated with the appearance of sores on the tongue and of other disturbances in the mouth.

In cases, therefore, where burning tongue persists, it is well to have a special examination made to find out whether dissimilar metals are present in the inlays of the teeth and whether a current develops between them.

In many instances, however, the burning sensations in connection with small fissures of the tongue, or canker sores, are neurotic. Canker sores are often associated with digestive disorders and sometimes appear as a result of sensitization to certain foods.

Persistent sores of this type may lead to a fear of cancer. Therefore it is advisable that these conditions be properly treated, to bring about healing as soon as possible.

A BOOK A DAY

By BRUCE CATTON

Here's One of Best Novels of the Year.

Don't let yourself miss "The Stars Look Down," by A. J. Cronin. It is far and away Dr. Cronin's best book to date; it is also one of the best novels of recent years.

It is a long, bulky, and powerful affair, this book, rough-hewn and bitter—a painstakingly complete study of the dry rot that came upon English society during the last two or three decades.

It deals with the people of a north-country coal town; with the greedy, dictatorial mine owner and the patient druggies who get out the coal; with the ambitious young men who try to rise in the world, with the idealists who try to make things better, and the grabbers who make things worse; and it offers a marvellous real and sympathetic picture of human beings caught in a system that seems to be beyond remedy.

Dr. Cronin shows us a great mine disaster, caused by the unprincipled greed of the mine owner. He shows us, English industry in war-time, an obscene spectacle of profiteering and gouging; he shows us a young labor leader fighting his way up to Parliament, struggling to improve the lot of the miners and getting sold out, finally, by his own associates; he shows us the final triumph of greed and cunning and self-seeking, and the crushing defeat of idealism and brave altruism.

All in all, he has given us a book of vast power and profound human interest. It is long, but it is never dull; it is impassioned, but it always remains pre-eminently a novel, a narrative. It is very much worth reading.

Published by Little, Brown and Co., it sells for $2.50.

YOUR CHILDREN

By Olive Roberts Barton

Persistent Criticism Harmful to Child.

"Billy, I told you not to dig a hole in the rose bed. I showed you a place at the back of the yard you may have for your own. Now fill this up and don't touch it again."

"Don't take your engine out on the sidewalk, Billy. Tommy Taylor is outside and he'll walk right off with it. Here's your old wagon. Be sure you don't let him have it."

"The red jelly? You don't want that purple jelly just as good."

"You brushed your hair the wrong way. Here, let me fix it."

"Goodness almighty, child, it doesn't make any difference what sweater you wear. Make up your mind, Billy."

"Don't moon around here and worry about what movie to see. Decide right away and get along with you."

More Indecision
"You'd better be getting that map finished. It's almost bedtime. What? Can't decide whether to make the mountains red or blue? You've been half an hour fiddling with that crayon. Close your eyes and pick up a piece, any one at all. There—green. Now use it. You certainly don't seem to be able to decide anything for yourself, Billy."

Thus ends chapter two.
The intermission is four years. Note the difference in this mother's method today.

Billy, now nine years old, is becoming a great reader. Books and movies fill his life. He puts off his lessons and won't play games with the other boys. He is taking an easy way out of facing problems and thinking for himself. It is not only hard for him to drag himself to a duty, but he has lost confidence in his own judgment. On the base ball team last summer he couldn't drop, but quickly enough he learned the rule, or, think fast enough to slide in that split second that lies between success and failure. Decisions of any kind irk him extremely and after they are made he is sure he should have done the other thing.

Initiative Takes Root Early
His mother is trying her best to rouse him with every means within her power, but initiative cannot be grafted this way. It has to grow its own roots early in life. Billy can learn another way, by a few bitter failures that will sting his pride to action, but the conflict between escape and responsibility may make him cross and unhappy.

In the first chapter, the boy's pre-adolescent years, it will be noticed that some of the things he had to do. We can't have children running things, or falling out of windows, or doing exactly as they please. They have to learn to accept telling and must get used to a certain amount of routine and regimentation.

Too Much Criticism Is Unwise
On the other hand the little flower of independence and confidence the parent behavior cannot be blighted or it will not grow. Too much growth of a small child's judgment is unwise. A few such episodes as the above won't matter, they happen in all families.

A daily bombardment of criticism will kill the child's faith in himself. Let him feel, as often as possible, that his ideas are as good as anybody's. Let that take root. Then train the sprout, prune it, guide it. Broken spirit is not always a result of beatings. Quite as effectual is the system of usurping the child's every choice ourselves when decision is trying to grow.

If my interpretation of Mr. Roosevelt is correct, the business community will henceforth observe in Washington a president who is anxious to out-Coachidge Coachidge in giving industrial prosperity to America—May L. B. Angus, British economist.

Husband Denies He Murdered Wife

Newell P. Sherman Admits, However, Affair With Another Woman

WORCESTER, Mass.—(AP)—Newell P. Sherman, husky, psalm-singing, accountant, denied Friday that he had drowned his wife, Alice, because of his love for another woman. He insisted he had never confessed killing her.

But he told of a trial courtship with the "other woman," 18-year-old Esther Magill, who only a few hours before had told from the stand her version of their clandestine affair.

The first witness for the defense, he took the stand in a desperate attempt to break the chain of evidence by which the state hopes to send him to the electric chair for murder.

A crowded courtroom heard him describe events which led to his wife's death on lonely Lake Singletary on the night of July 20. They had paddled for shore, he said. There on the floor of the canoe, a few minutes before it capsized in the lake plunging her to death and freeing him, so the state charges, that he might be free to marry Miss Magill, there had been a final romantic interlude.

Sherman's voice, which had rung out firmly as he opened his testimony with his story of his relations with Miss Magill, appeared near the breaking point once or twice as he denied responsibility for his wife's death and narrated subsequent events.

GLORIFYING YOURSELF

By Alicia Hart

Keep Coiffure From Ruining Profile.

Hair that is arranged smoothly backward from the face and forehead gives the face a clean cut, well groomed look and makes the profile more interesting. This is something the Hollywood stars learn as soon as they are hairdressers and beauticians of the various studios. To prove this, all you have to do is look at a few before and after pictures of various stars.

For instance, when red-headed Janet Gaynor first played in pictures, her hair was fuzzy instead of sleek and allowed to billow about her cheeks and to dip far down over her forehead.

Her widow's peak was lost completely. Her nice profile was hidden. Even her eyes were overshadowed.

Now, however, thanks to the coiffure experts and to a new trend in hair styles, Janet's flaming locks are shorter and they're brushed backward from her face. Her widow's peak shows. Her face has a neater look and her eyes are accentuated.

If you like little curls just in front of your ears, see that they are extremely small and not especially fluffy. Remember that parts which do not extend all the way from front to back generally are more flattering.

Try shorter parts, perhaps even a crooked one that slants upward from the middle of your head.

Remember, too, that a flat line across the back adds allure to a nicely shaped head. Most of the Hollywood stars have the front and sides waved but wear the back perfectly straight. Visiting Europe, to mention one, has two wide waves on the left side of her head, one on the right, a large bun at the back and not even a suggestion of a wave about it.

NEXT: Beauty for your children.

are interesting enough, but live up often to the batters of a series live up to their record in the regular season.

"Pitching was most of the games. And errors at critical points lose a lot of them. Fred Snodgrass' $100,000 mutt that ruined Matt's great pitching against the Red Sox in the final game in 1912. Roger Peckinpaugh's eight errors for the Senators against the Pirates in 1925 and Goose Goslin's inexpert fielding last year, are examples."

2nd for Chicago
ST. LOUIS, Mo.—The Cubs reached the end of the pennant trail Friday by winning a doubleheader 4-2 and 5-3, after a drive that warmed up prior to reaching off the season's high count on consecutive wins.

On the afternoon of August 21 at Philadelphia the Cubs took the first game of a double-header. Until then they had merely moved ahead of the final war at Philadelphia, they went into New York and knocked off the Giants in three of four battles. Two out of three at Boston followed. Then an even break in two games at Pittsburgh.

Home was the next stopping place and the march suddenly became something that put a different complexion on the National League race. The Cubs won the doubleheader 4-2 and 5-3, after a drive that warmed up prior to reaching off the season's high count on consecutive wins.

Until then they had merely moved ahead of the final war at Philadelphia, they went into New York and knocked off the Giants in three of four battles. Two out of three at Boston followed. Then an even break in two games at Pittsburgh.

Home was the next stopping place and the march suddenly became something that put a different complexion on the National League race. The Cubs won the doubleheader 4-2 and 5-3, after a drive that warmed up prior to reaching off the season's high count on consecutive wins.

On the afternoon of August 21 at Philadelphia the Cubs took the first game of a double-header. Until then they had merely moved ahead of the final war at Philadelphia, they went into New York and knocked off the Giants in three of four battles. Two out of three at Boston followed. Then an even break in two games at Pittsburgh.

The BLUE DOOR

BEGIN HERE TODAY
RUTH WOODS, pretty, 19-year-old girl in search of work, seeks refuge from a storm in an old stone house with a blue door in the little town of Worthville. The queer old housekeeper, HELEN GIBBS, who is known as "THE BLUE DOOR," takes her in. ELAINE CHALMERS, a girl who is in love with JOHN MCNEILL, the young man next door, and who is a student at the Argonne College, comes to a party given by HELEN GIBBS, who is known as "THE BLUE DOOR," and who is in love with JOHN MCNEILL, the young man next door, and who is a student at the Argonne College.

Cubs Put 4 Aces Against Detroit

Warneke, French, Lee and Root, Moundsmen Who Copped the Pennant

By DICK STROBEL
CHICAGO—(AP)—These are happy days for the loquacious one of the Chicago Cubs—Catcher Gabby Hartnett.

Beneath his barrel-like chest a heart surges with joy, contemplating the prospect of enjoying the Detroit Tigers in the World Series.

More gold is not the motivating force. His delight comes from the fact he has four starting pitchers, all capable of going the full route.

To appreciate the full extent of Gabby's unrestrained glee, it must be borne in mind that such a situation, especially for the return Mr. Hartnett, is unique.

Ten often has he watched some well-intentioned pitcher driven to the showers. The reason, when he considers Lou Warneke, Larry French, Bill Lee and Charley Root, his happiness knows no bounds.

They Start and Finish
Each has contributed his share to the stretch drive that carried the Cubs to the pennant of the National League. Together they established something of a record by starting, finishing and winning 14 out of 15 straight games.

Warneke, the Arkansas sphinx, is the ace of the pitching rotation, the donor of a score of victories to the Cubs' cause.

Despite the loss of ten pounds during the 1935 campaign, Warneke teiled his full share of games. Unflustered on the mound, although occasionally temperamental elsewhere, he liked it when the going is tough. His fast ball, change of pace, and control are the factors responsible for his success.

On Southpaw in 'Big 4'
Of the Cubs' big four, only Larry French is a left-hander. His current fortune on the mound is the best he has enjoyed in years, and the Cub management regards him as 50 percent better than when he worked for Pittsburgh.

Perhaps some of his success is due to his mastery of the curve ball. During most of his career, French relied greatly on a "screwball," finding his efforts with curves generally were productive of hits and free passes to first base. Now he still uses his old standby, but only to provide variety.

Root is Back in Form
The latest surprise in the pitching department is the veteran Charley Root, whose exhibitions this year are rivaled only by his 1929 successes.

Root was too much of a good thing in those days, and he was sadly overworked the next three years. Given the rest he required in 1933 and 1934, he blossomed out this year in his old form, much to the delight of all concerned with the pennant aspirations of the Cubs.

Equally as gratifying has been the performance of Bill Lee in his second year with the Cubs. Youngest in point of service, he possesses, in Hartnett's opinion, one of the best curves in the game. His fast ball and control have stood the test of big-time competition, and in any engagement, he will be as valuable as the next.

They're Unlucky, Too
It was only natural that with all this good fortune, the Cubs should experience some compensating bad luck, which manifested itself in the disappointing ending of Tex Carleton.

When the season started, Carleton was billed as a starting pitcher. Then Carleton was hit most profusely. Promptly he became a relief pitcher. In that capacity he has been a valuable adjunct.

The rest of the relief load has been with some exceptions, the burden of Roy Henshaw, a southpaw. His inclinations toward wildness have prevented him from becoming the first rate pitcher the Cub bosses believe he some day will be.

What remains of the relief duty is handled by Clyde Slocum, Hugh Casey and Fabian Kowalik, none of whom has seen a great deal of service with the Cubs.

AS soon as Elaine was out of the house Bertha went up to the third floor again. It was her fourth trip. Each time she had found Duncan Hunter sleeping. Now he was coming awake, opening his eyes and looking at her.

"How about some food?" he asked, smiling.

"It's almost supper time," Bertha nodded. "You've slept all day!"

He laughed and she bent and touched his shoulder warningly. "Remember, there's a girl in the house, Mr. Duncan!"

"I know," he nodded. "A fine girl. We had a talk last night."

Bertha stared. This was news then she remembered something. "But not that one, Mr. Duncan. She went away."

"Wait away!" exclaimed Duncan Hunter. "But of course. I remember now. She told me she was leaving today. Well, I'm sorry. A fine girl. I'll tell you after dinner what she's persuaded me to do. Quite a girl. Lots of pluck—"

"But another one's here," old Bertha said, prying him out of his reverie. "Your niece, Elaine."

"Ah!" he said. "Another one!" Again he laughed loudly and normally. "What is this house, Bertha? A young ladies' seminary?"

Bertha was upset at his levity. She was even more upset when he announced, "I'm through hiding, Bertha. Tonight I'll sit at my own table. Let my niece like it or not."

"But the Deals are your enemies, Mr. Duncan!" she reminded him. "Don't do it! Don't do it!"

He said, "I'm not afraid of the Deals, nor of anybody. Tomorrow I'm going back to the place where I came from, and soon I'm going to walk out the front door of that place with my freedom. Now go down and set the table for two."

Bertha Gibbs. Tonight I'll show my niece what an entertaining old uncle she has."

Fuller said the administration had made some mistakes and that he had "voted for bills I did not believe in."

A Prayer Rug

We're brading rugs for rugs today. Blending the pieces, dull and gay; And while my fingers deftly ply, My thoughts to green and far fields fly.

This bit of blue, soft shimmering, Brings back a butterfly's bright wing; The sunset's from a shell-pink rose; The dew and rain and sunshine know; This gray stuff's from a field-mouse hole;

(When mouse peered out he looked so droll) Here's old-gold plush from a fumbling bee, Drunk with ambrosial ecstasy.

With quill from a yellow-warbler's feather I sew the braided bits together, And on my rug with thistle-floss, The Earth's dear name I then emboss.

Now that I've fastened this last row, I turn my face to the sunset glow, I spread my rug on the close-clipped sod

And breathe a prayer to the Living God.

"In the plumes of the golden eagle, In the lowly rayed stem, I have glimpsed Thy Presence regal, I have touched Thy garment's hem."

—Selected.

IMPRESSIONS OF THE WEEK

September 22-28

We can either braid rosy sunny dreams in today, or we can braid sorid prophesies for tomorrow. This morning the breakfast club gave a song over the radio entitled, "Roll Out of Bed With a Smile." I wonder how many of us do that? Association with your garden in the early morning will help, and pretty soon, you will find yourself "spreading your rug on the close-clipped sod, breathing a prayer to the Living God."

The only redeeming feature about the Baer-Louis fight was the preamble and description of the crowd by Edwin C. Hill, who has the faculty of making an occasion of the most questionable affair, and taking the most ordinary words and drop them like jewels; however, we couldn't help but feel that he was just a little out of place in this instance, it seemed like the promoters only used him to try and put a brutal worse than brutal (this time) affair on a higher plane, but like Banquo's ghost, the brutality

Claudette Colbert at the Saenger

"She Married Her Boss"
Opens 3-Day Engagement Here Sunday

The problem of a private secretary are briskly dealt with in Claudette Colbert's newest picture, "She Married Her Boss," which comes Sunday, Monday and Tuesday to the Saenger.

Produced by the same company that gave you Miss Colbert in "It Happened One Night," the new film has the same buoyancy and freshness that made its predecessor a five-way prize-winner. "She Married Her Boss" is undoubtedly the grandest fun since the falling of the walls of Jericho.

Miss Colbert herself is delightful; her inherent charm and vivacity have never been shown to better advantage. As a very efficient secretary who carelessly falls in love with her boss, she sees to it that he takes off one day to buy her a wedding ring. That proves a costly mistake. For the marriage turns out to be one of the maddest things one can imagine.

The fun continues fast and furious, with Miss Colbert as the storm center. Melvyn Douglas does a fine job as the frantic boss, and Michael Bartlett, last seen in Grace Moore's "Love Me Forever," is thoroughly engaging as a devil-may-care chap who tries to manage the secretary's affairs for her.

Edith Fellows as the boss' pheasant nine-year-old daughter; Katherine Alexander as his nerve-wrecked sister; Raymond Walburn as a butler; Jean Dixon as Miss Colbert's enemy; and Clara Kimball Young in a small role are all splendid.

Mrs. L. A. Foster has returned from a six weeks visit with relatives in Los Angeles, and other California points.

Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Brundidge, who are occupying their cottage on Lake Hamilton, near Hot Springs, spent Friday in the city.

Taylor Alexander of Ouachita college, Arkadelphia is spending the week end with home folks.

Miss Willie Lawson of Little Rock is the week end guest of Miss Beryl Henry. Miss Lawson was one of the guest speakers at the School of Instruction held at the high school Saturday.

Comer Routon is spending the week end with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Routon Sr., after entering his sophomore year in Arkansas Medical college, Little Rock.

Miss Geneva Higdon of Ouachita college, Arkadelphia, is spending the week end with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Luther Higdon.

Taylor Alexander has as Friday night guests, Jimmie Hoggard and Billy Mankin, both of Ouachita college, Arkadelphia.

J. W. Franks, student in Tyler Commercial college, is visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Franks Sr. He will return to school early next week.

Home Clubs

Mount Pleasant
The Mt. Pleasant community club met at the home of Mrs. Bon Cooley September 24, with 14 members present and Mrs. A. C. Holt and Mrs. George C. McLarty were guests of the club.

The meeting was called to order by the president, Mrs. Hayne Hutchinson. Miss Ruth Griffith, secretary, read the minutes and called the roll.

Miss Helen Griffin was present and gave some helpful demonstrations on sewing.

The hostess served a delicious dinner to all, and in the afternoon invited the club in the living room to an old fashioned quilting, and a good time was reported by all.

The next meeting will be on October 22, at Mrs. Hayne Hutchinson's and will be a club fair. The members are to bring two jars each of fruit, vegetables and meats, also their choicest piece of fancy work.

Memel to Vote Sunday for Rule by Lithuania or Nazi Germany

By NEA Service

Overshadowed though it is by the more immediate menace of war in Ethiopia and the Mediterranean, the question of Memel, little Baltic seaport, over which Germany and Lithuania are bitterly contending, bears serious threat of armed conflict.

Memel and its hinterland will vote on September 29 as to whether they will be independent, remain autonomous under Lithuanian protection, or return to the Reich. The city and its territory (943 square miles, 140,000 population) were detached from Germany by the Versailles treaty and placed under control of a council of ambassadors. A coup in 1923 gave Lithuania possession and this was ratified by a League of Nations Commission.

Since that time strife has been almost continuous between the Lithuanian government and the Germans, who are overwhelmingly in the majority among the population. Charges have been hurled by Adolf Hitler that the Germans have been ruthlessly deprived of their rights of assembly, education, and the franchise. Lithuania has countercharged that Germans were stirring rebellion, in an effort to oust the little country from its only seaport.

Diplomatic representatives of France, Britain, and Italy recently protested to the Kovno government, as guarantors of the treaty under which Memel is governed, against any discrimination or persecution of Germans.

Confesses Slaying Kindly Uncle, Aunt

Leroy Drake, 19, Held for Poisoning Them, Pushing Bodies in Sea

LOS ANGELES, Calif.—(AP)—Fruit Leroy Drake, 19, prize Sunday school student and amateur chemist, was said by police Thursday night to be ready to "take his medicine" for poisoning his kindly aunt and uncle and burying them in the Pacific.

The youth disclosed his intention to plead guilty, investigators said, after an alleged confession which led them to the bodies of the victims—Mr. and Mrs. Henry Steinheuer—in an automobile at the bottom of the ocean.

Police Detective Frank Condalet said the mild-mannered suspect admitted: Getting into trouble on an automobile theft charge; Giving a virulent poison to his benevolent relatives and watching them "keel over" in death; Placing their bodies in the family automobile and sending it hurtling over a cliff into the ocean near here.

Authorities found two teaspoons rocking with the odor of poison in an alley.

Drake told police, they said, that his motive was to "end the worry of my uncle and aunt over the mess (of the stolen car) I got myself into."

"My aunt's worrying caused my uncle to become ill," police quoted him as saying. "She was ashamed to go out on the street. She would try to pull herself together and kinda straighten up her face every time she stepped out of the door."
